Addendum II: Experience

Profile

With a population of almost 460,000, Manchester is the UK's third largest city yet widely regarded as Britain's second city and arguably the most exciting, cultural and forward-thinking. The decline of manufacturing and heavy industry in the 1980s and the subsequent dramatic rise in unemployment, provided a powerful catalyst for the city to regenerate itself and seek a new direction. And the main engine for this came in the wake of the IRA bomb attack in 1996.
